More questions than answers

Restored Hope

December 11, 2020 the FDA issued its first emergency use authorization (EUA) for a vaccine for the prevention of novel coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) to Pfizer-BioNTech and just two days later issuing the second EUA to Moderna's vaccine also developed to fight COVID-19. As more pharmaceutical companies seek FDA authorizations to get their COVID-19 vaccines into the market, each helps to restore hope of a return to normalcy is in the distant future. With so many unanswered questions, how can employers prepare their workforce and organization to effectively manage vaccinations?

COVID-19 Vaccination Crusade

Considering the current battle with increasing infection rates the US alone is facing, the foreseeable future with vaccinations will need a clear strategy behind workplace infectious disease protocols to ensure workplace health and safety is not compromised. Even though most employers will not be administering COVID-19 vaccines in house, monitoring and tracking employee's immunization status will be critical data to examine before corporations consider lifting current work-at-home and/or physical distance restrictions. Knowing which employees have been vaccinated, and who have not been, is the core of any effective vaccination strategy. Manually tracking, collecting and confirming this information with paper records, email attachments and spreadsheets is labor intense and error prone, exposing the enterprise to health, safety and legal risks.

Ratify AI - The Digital Cure for Vaccination Management

Ratify AI's vaccination module enables organizations to digitally track, monitor and report on workforce immunizations - quick and easy. Maintain employee vaccination roster from one central location knowing all applicable employees have been captured for tracking. Automate employee engagement through customizable business rules to educate, obtain consent, and remind them of their upcoming or follow up appointments. Business leaders and supervisors gain access to real-time workforce immunization data to evaluate and identify key insights to better manage productivity objectives, and guide more effective decisions. Now is the time to position your organization for success with the framework to coordinate, communicate and gather data effectively by launching Ratify AI's vaccination tracking module.
